Sawasdee!

Welcome to the struggle to free Southeast Asia from dictatorship. The world has, thankfully, begun to take note that all Thais do not love the monarchy, that in reality the great majority are viciously subjected to - little more than victims of - the laws of lès majesté that enable the Thai monarchy to block their democratic aspirations. We Thais feel deeply for the pain of the people in Myanmar. We admire their courage.

The Royal Thai Army's crushing of the democratically elected governments of 2006 and 2014 caused the deep injustices hidden under the surface of the Kingdom of Thailand to become increasingly visible. Thais, journalists and academics, in Thailand and around the world, have begun speaking-out about life under the coconut shell, about 'kalaland', about the social conditions produced by the 7 decades of militarised politics under King Bhumibol that began on 9 June 1946 with the death of King Ananda and the restoration of monarchical power under the auspices of the USA during the Cold War.

The murder of royal Thai subjects demanding their rights on the streets of Bangkok by the Royal Thai Army in May 2010 has resulted, slowly but surely, in an ever increasing number of Thai people concluding that the time has come to confront the Chakri dynasty directly. In 2010, under the name 'ACT4DEM Thailand', we began campaigning to raise international understanding of the oppressive function of Thailand's laws of lès majesté (Article 112 of the Criminal Code).

In succeeding his father, who oversaw 12 military coups between 1947 - 2016, Vajiralongkorn, Thailand's new self-centred king is showing himself to be nothing less than hell-bent on personally controlling, delimiting and dominating democratic process and procedure. The last 10 years of political tragi-comedy - falling under the dictatorship of General Prayuth in 2014, worsening in the wake of Vajiralongkorn's succession in 2016 - have made it abundantly clear that, hand-in-glove, 'Rama 10 and his generals' are determined to retain and maintain total-control over the political life of Thai people. Obviously and quite naturally, there is, at the same time, an ever increasing number of Thai people concluding that, for their own sake and the sake of their nation, it is time to rid Thailand of feudalism once and for all - time now to leave the past behind, time, now, for the people to take control of their future, to fully embrace democracy, ACT4DEM decided to formally register as an international organisation in Europe. It was registered as a non-profit association in May 2020 with the following statutory purpose :

To promote human rights, social justice, democracy and the protection of natural resources in Thailand and elsewhere in Mainland Southeast Asia. To achieve its purpose, the association researches social policy and cultural issues, organizes study trips, seminars, conferences and public events, publishes research data and results, and networks with organizations with similar goals worldwide.

Since Vajiralongkorn, even after becoming Head of State, was spending nearly all his time in Germany - with several residences, a huge entourage of women, servants and guards and a couple of Boeing 737s, in 2020 ACT4DEM decided to launch a 'Campaign to bring the Thai king to justice'.

Working in close association with pixelHELPER and Thai communities in Germany, we organised public protest actions in many cities - and outside the king's residences, and provided political leaders in Germany and the European Parliament with extensive information about the corrupt and potentially highly incriminating activities and actions of the king. Media coverage of the campaign in Germany reached around the world with significant impact on public awareness of the breadth and depth of top-down corruption in Thailand.

In this our struggle for democracy many people are to be thanked for their understanding, cooperation and solidarity. We thank profoundly the 100 or so Thai friends from all around the world for the contributions that made the 2020 campaign possible - around 27 000 Euro in total. Huge thanks to the courage of our condemned-by-the-junta partner PixelHELPER. Great thanks to all Thais in Germany who came forward with courage to join the protests, especially to all the wonderful volunteers who helped with the organisational work, graphics, translation, and transport, and to the Thai families who helped with accommodation. Many thanks also to the Clean Clothes Campaign for their gift of 200 T-shirts to help with fund-raising. Deep thanks to our team of lawyers and legal experts. Since this is our first Action Report as a registered association we extend great thanks to our book-keeping and accounting team for providing the association with a sound fiscal footing.

Background

ACT4DEM emerged during the bloody massacre of civilians by the Royal Thai Army in Bangkok 13-19 May 2010, with the launch of an on-line petition to 'Stop the Bloodshed in Thailand' on 16 May. Within 2 days the petition was blocked (in Thailand) by the military junta's so-called Centre for Resolution of the Emergency Situation (CRES). Nonetheless, with 9416 signatures, the petition was delivered to Ban Ki Moon via UN HQ Bangkok on 26 October 2010.

In 2010 the ACT4DEM action agenda was defined as follows:

- Exposing the root-causes of Thailand's domestic crisis.
- Campaigning for the release of all political and lèse majesté prisoners. (Supporting all campaigning to abolish LM112.)
- Mobilising support for citizen-activists and human right's defenders – in Thailand and in exile, that are being victimised / criminalised / tortured by Thailand's monarcho-militarists.
- Publicising testimonies, political issues and events from the grass-root perspective – to counter-balance royalist / governmental propaganda, cover-ups and suppression.
- Drawing the attention of the public to attempts to bring to court the perpetrators of state violence against civilians (including the bringing of ex-PM Abhisit Vejjajiva and other top-brass to the International Criminal Court the political murders of 2010).
- Ensuring that the international community, the ASEAN and the United Nations have no means to pretend they do not have information about monarcho-military state oppression in Thailand.
- Raising political awareness in the tourist industry, and organising tourist campaigns, to ensure that no company or tourist can claim that they are not aware of political oppression in Thailand, or of the human consequences of that oppression.
- Up-dating the website.

. . with demands as follows:

- Outlawing of all types of 'Protect the Monarchy' paramilitary activity, especially government-sponsored paramilitary activity and propaganda.
- Justice and compensation to the victims of state oppression, including to the families of those who died in 2010 as a result of government orders to crush civilian protest.
- Release of all political and lèse majesté prisoners.
- Abolition of the law of lèse majesté.
- Abolition of the Privy Council.
- Termination all powers and possibilities for the Monarchy to interfere in political decision-making.

2020 ACTION REPORT

The military coups against Thailand's elected parliaments and governments in 2006 and 2014, and the de-facto return of military dictatorship have been driving Thailand backwards - into a political quagmire of the Royal Thai Army's very own making. The ascent of Thailand's new royal potentate has only managed to further expose to the world, in a factual manner, the noxious features of this latest Thai regime.

This long, chaotic, tragic, most recent decade of struggle to liberate Thailand from the grip of monarcho-militarism - from a militarised dictatorship desperate to uphold a monarchy more autocratic and more deeply and openly corrupt than ever before, leads most people to a decidedly singular logical deduction: the time has come to campaign openly to free Thailand from the yolk of monarchy.

ACT4DEM's long journey with in-field research leads to the same conclusion - that dissolution of the Thai monarchy is in fact a necessary precondition for the struggle for equal rights in Thailand to be able to succeed.

After the rescue of the musical band Faiyen from Laos, whose members were next on the 'to be terminated list', and their safe arrival in Paris in August 2019, ACT4DEM recognised that it was necessary to review how to campaign, in Europe and throughout the ASEAN, for democracy and justice in Thailand.

All research indicated that Thailand's Head of State, King Vajiralongkorn, is a criminal personage and that bringing the many crimes of this personage to public notice, and to courts of law, was essential work.

Launch of campaign in Germany to bring the Thai king to justice and end monarcho-militarism in Thailand.

Untouchable by law in Thailand, upon ascending the throne, the new king, who as Crown Prince had become a resident of Germany in 2007, continued to imagine he could do as he pleases in Germany as Thailand's Head of State.

In April 2020 ACT4DEM was contacted by the organisation pixelHELPER, which is based in Germany, with a request to join forces in the task of exposing the Thai king for what he is - in fact not myth. PixelHELPER is a loose-knit group of free-thinkers and artists, that works with imagery, music and satire to confront injustice, and tyrannical persona in particular.

Both associations recognised the Thai king as a criminal personage who should be indicted for a range of crimes, including responsibility for multiple murders. Both recognised that, protected by draconian laws of lès majesté, with direct personal access to tens of billions (Euro) and direct personal command of some 80 000 elite troops, this criminal personage, as Head of State, is the main obstacle blocking the non - violent pathways to the advancement of human rights, democracy, equitable sustainable development and just procedure in Thailand.

Previously unknown in Thailand, PixelHELPER has the honour of being the first civic organisation in Europe to have the courage to step forward with concrete action to expose the contradictions, pitfalls and dangers of permitting Thailand's Head of State in-absentia to conduct and direct criminal operations from his residences in Germany.

Collaboration between ACT4DEM and pixelHELPER has been a process of learning how to pioneer political protest in a geo-political arena that has been allowed to slumber in moral ignominy, largely because millions of westerners became accustomed to taking for granted their ability to exploit for pleasure, as if it were a right, the democratic vacuum in Thailand created and maintained by royalist suppression of the democratic aspirations of the great majority of Thai people.

The aim of the campaign was to bring the attention of the German and European public to the contradictions and triple-standards, in Thailand and Europe, that permit the Thai king to use Germany as a sanctuary for indulging his egocentric fantasies, and for plotting and conducting murderous operations against dissenters and opponents of his regime in Thailand.

Good humour aside, the campaign's main armament has been a light-projector - for projecting satirical messages onto the facades of relevant buildings, for example onto German and Thai administrative buildings.

From May through to December these light projections, often in conjunction with protest actions and street happenings, were organised on a near weekly basis. The campaign took no action without permission of the German authorities.

Documentation and reporting of these campaign events and happenings has reached many millions of people in Germany and Thailand and around the world, raising understanding of political realities in Thailand, and understanding that the conduct of this criminal king and his military regime cannot be tolerated.

SAY ‘NO to Article 112’ of the Thai Criminal Code.

After the 1976 military coup the penalty for lèse majesté was raised from 7 to 15 yrs. Since the 2006 military coup hundreds are facing from 3 to 20 years in jail for just talking openly about the monarchy. Under this law anyone can sue anyone. In most cases bail is denied. Pleading guilty and pardon-begging are the only ways to escape the horrors of prison life.
